Uncle Sam Says

President Truman, in his emergency message to you folks, said: "In the days ahead each one of us should measure his own efforts, his own sacrifices, by the standard of our heroic men in Korea." There is one sure way of measuring your own individual effort here at home and that is the purchase of U. S. Savings Bonds. IN MEMORIAM
In memory of my mother, Mrs. H. B. Marshall, whom God called away one year ago, February 26, 1950.
February brings sad memories
Of a dear one gone to rest,
Who will never be forgotten
By the ones who loved her best.
You were a loving mother,
Always kind and true,
Living just and upright,
And doing for others what you could do.
Your heart you task is at, all thy work,
Your love the best to recall:
For no one on earth can take your place,
You are still the dearest of all.
Son, John Forest Marshall, and her Sisters.

Ask for More Trained Men For Animal Disease Study

Solution to some of the nation's most costly animal diseases is being shoved by lack of highly trained research men.
There is urgent need for giving promising young scientists an opportunity to learn the technique of animal disease investigation.
The only way this can be done is by a long range fellowship program.
Such a program has been sponsored by the AVMA for the past six years. Under this program, which will be expanded as funds permit, research-minded graduates of colleges of veterinary medicine get financial aid to engage in animal disease studies at leading scientific institutions. This gives them background and experience needed for unraveling highly complex diseases.
Many livestock and pet owners who ask for "more research to solve disease problems" have given too little thought to how the job might be done.
Finding out what causes a perplexing animal disease isn't much different from tracking down a dangerous criminal, and neither is a job for anyone but a well-trained person.
The Federal Bureau of Investigation would not put a man on any of its cases without first training him in FBI methods. The same advantage should be given to people interested in disease investigation.
Funds for expanding the fellowship project should come from private sources rather than the federal government "because the nation already has gone too far toward dependence on federal hand-outs."

Mastitis Germs Live 5 Days on Broomstick

Harmless though it may look, that broom in the corner of the barn might be the means of starting a new case of bovine mastitis.
The germ responsible for most cases of bovine mastitis can stay alive for as long as 20 days on objects around the barn, and for as long as 26 days anywhere on a cow's skin. From these jumping - off places, the germ may eventually get into a cow's udder, where it starts the disease known as mastitis.
Survival time of the germ was observed after mastitis-infected milk was poured on manure, hair, wood, bricks, udder cloths, and other materials commonly found or used around dairy barns.
The germ stayed alive for 4 days on rubber boots, 5 days on a broom handle, 7 days on an udder-washing cloth, 8 days on a bucket, 13 days on hair, and 20 days on hay. However, when some of these objects were treated with a disinfectant before being smeared with infected milk, the germ didn't do so well. Enough of the disinfectant lingered to cut down the survival time to a day or less.
This research emphasizes the need for clean barns, clean cows, clean attendants, and prompt disinfection of any object that gets splattered with milk.

Origin of Camouflage

The origin of the worn camouflage has, it seems, been lost in the shuffle. One of the stories told in connection with it is that, during the Indian troubles in the Southwest, one Jacques Camou built a circular mud fort. This fort had large square openings at regular intervals around the walls. Through these, the garrison of the fort would fire. As the Indians' shots also found their mark through these openings, Camou painted the entire fort like a checkerboard—with large black squares on a white field. This confused the Indians so they were unable to determine at which dark squares to aim.

Thermal Snow Removal

Thermal snow removal from sidewalks and driveways by means of embedded piping is a new and interesting development in the heating industry. The snow is removed automatically and without effort by the heat from pipe coils installed under the surface of the pavement. Hot water, circulated through the coils, transfers its heat to the pavement, thus melting the snow and keeping the surface dry. Automatic snow removal is economical. There is no necessity for using rock salt, sand, or chemicals. All the owner does is to turn the switch to start the system in operation when it appears

New Emphasis In Club Work

SHIFT IN EMPHASIS SEEN IN DEMONSTRATION WORK

The shift in population—and in way of life—from rural to urban and to rural "non-farm" is putting new demands on the home demonstration program in Virginia, says Miss Maude E. Wallace, assistant director of the Extension Service at V. P. I.
There are, she points out, some 1,157,000 people living in cities and towns of more than 2,500 population. Of the 55 per cent classed as rural, it is estimated that about 25 per cent are rural non-farm. "When people change their way of life from farm to industry, their patterns of living are changed considerably . . . these changes have pointed up the need for modifying the home demonstration program," Miss Wallace says.
For instance, stress is now being put on the "consumer element." Families who used to produce most of their food, make most of their own clothing, etc., now buy a large per cent. They are asking for help in wise buying, wise use of time "It is mainly a problem of management," Miss Wallace says.
As rural electrification becomes widespread (about 91 per cent of Virginia's farms now have electricity available), homemakers seek more technical advice on buying and using appliances.
Electrification and availability of appliances and modern conveniences have also made it necessary for families to study and plan carefully for all home building or remodeling. Many families live in old houses not originally designed to accomodate modern facilities. "With building costs high, even in proportion to increased income, good planning is essential," Miss Wallace says.
More emphasis also is being put on rural arts, nutrition, and clothing.
